The SPEECH of his EXCELLENCY FRANCIS BERNARD, Eſq;

Captain-General and Governor in Chief, in and over His Majeſty's Province of Maſſachuſets-Bay, in New-England, and Vice-Admiral of the ſame;

To the Great and General Court of the ſaid Province.

Gentlemen of the Council, and
Gentlemen of the Houſe of Repreſentatives,

AT the Opening of this General Court, I have no Orders from his Majeſty to communicate to you; nor any thing to offer myſelf but what relates to your internal Policy: I ſhall therefore take this Opportunity to point out ſuch domeſtic Buſineſs as more immediately deſerves your Attention.

Soon after my arrival to this Government, I formed in my Mind an Idea of three Improvements which this Country was capable of making profitable to itſelf and convenient to Great Britain: I mean Pot-Aſh, Hemp, and the carrying Lumber to the Britiſh Markets. They are all proper Staples for New England; and muſt be very acceptable to Great Britain, as ſhe is at preſent ſupplied with them from Foreigners by a loſing Trade.

I have already had the Pleaſure to ſee the firſt of theſe eſtabliſhed with Effect, and wanting now nothing but Care to preſerve it's Credit, and prevent the general Quality of the Goods, which is of a ſuperior kind, being rendered doubtful and ſuſpicious by the fraudulent Practices of Particulars. This is a neceſſary Caution at the Commencement of a new Trade; for upon its firſt Reputation depends its future Succeſs. There is already a Law for the Regulation of this Trade; but it wants to be carried into Execution; this I muſt deſire may be done this Seſſion, as it is now become immediately wanting.

You have lately given a public Teſtimony of your Deſire to promote the Production of Hemp: I am equally perſwaded of your good Intentions to the Improvement of the Lumber-trade; as you muſt be ſenſible of the Inſufficiency of the preſent Markets for the Reception of the great Quantity of Lumber which is now produced, and which will be continually increaſing. The Parliament of Great-Britain has already given Encouragement to the one; and it is hoped that it will alſo extend its Bounty to the other.

Theſe are proper Objects of your Concern; Works, which naturally ariſe in your own Country, ſtrengthen your Connection with Great-Britain, may eaſily be confined within yourſelves, and will ſoon be ſuperior to thoſe of foreign Rivals. When theſe are added to your other Reſources, they will form a Fund, which, with the Bleſſing of GOD upon your Induſtry and Frugality, will be adequate to the Expence of all neceſſary Imports; and you will have no Occaſion, as you have hitherto ſhewn no Diſpoſition, vainly to attempt to tranſfer Manufactories from their ſettled Abode; an Undertaking at all Times difficult, but, under the diſadvantage of high-priced Labour, impracticable.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Repreſentatives,

I ſhall order the Treaſurer to lay before you the preſent State of the Treaſury; that you may conſider of further Means for reducing and finally diſcharging the Provincial Debt with Eaſe to the People. I ſhall be ready to concur with you in all neceſſary Meaſures for that Purpoſe, that ſhall be agreeable to the Laws and Inſtructions by which I muſt form my Conduct.

Gentlemen,

The general Settlement of the American Provinces, which has been long ago propoſed, and now probably will be proſecuted to its utmoſt Completion, muſt neceſſarily produce ſome Regulations, which, from their Novelty only, will appear diſagreeable. But I am convinced, and doubt not but Experience will confirm it, that they will operate as they are deſigned, for the Benefit and Advantage of the Colonies. In the mean time a reſpectful Submiſſion to the Decrees of the Parliament, is their Intereſt, as well as their Duty.

In an Empire, extended and diverſified as that of Great-Britain, there muſt be a ſupreme Legiſlature, to which all other Powers muſt be ſubordinate. It is our Happineſs that our ſupreme Legiſlature, the Parliament of Great-Britain, is the Sanctuary of Liberty and Juſtice; and that the Prince, who preſides over it, realizes the Idea of a Patriot King. Surely then we ſhould ſubmit our Opinions to the Determinations of ſo auguſt a Body; and acquieſce in a perfect Confidence, that the Rights of the Members of the Britiſh Empire will ever be ſafe in the Hands of the Conſervators of the Liberty of the whole.

// This Speech the House did not Answer, perhaps they did not understand it who Could? * Now the Wolf shews himself notwithstanding his Sheeps Cloathing. /// Stamp act to be repealed See Charter, pa. 107, Vol. 2.

March and April Packets are arrived at New-York from Falmouth; the latter in 30 Days.

Extract of a Letter from London, Feb. 16. 1765.

GEN. C-ll-y, said in the House, "the last session of Parliament we came to a resolution, that it might be proper to tax the Americans; at that time it was thrown out; I am sure I understood it so, that the intention of this resolution was, to give to the Americans time to represent their inability, or to suggest the propriety of a less burthensome tax than the stamp-duty: This time has been given; the representations are come from the colonies; and shall we shut our ears against that information, which, with an affection of candor, we allotted sufficient time to reach us? For my own part, I must declare myself just as much in the dark as I was the last year, my way of life does not engage me in intercourse with commercial gentlemen, or those who have any knowledge of the colonies. I declare upon my honor I expected, as a member sitting in this house, to receive such information as, in consequence of the notice given, might be transmitted by the colonies, by which my judgment might be directed, my conduct regulated. In a question so important, with regard to two millions of unrepresented people, I lay aside every consideration of party, and shall therefore make no scruple to declare my opinion, that the Jamaica petition is not admissible, because it does not come from the colony, and of course cannot contain those lights, which I am sure, I am desirous of receiving, and which the colonists themselves can only give. But there are, I am informed, other petitions of the nature which I describe, that I am for receiving. A great deal has been said of the standing and established rule of this house, that no petitions can be received against money-bills. What is this rule! I recollect no order, no resolution occurs to me; & it appears undeniable, from what has been advanced on both sides, that the practice is by no means invariable; at best, it is but a practice of convenience; a practice which in this instance, if in no other, ought we to vary from; for from whom unless themselves are we to learn the circumstances of the colonies, & the fatal consequences that may attend the imposing of this tax; I speak this with great deference to the abilities of the very few agents who sit in parliament, some of the colonies have not this advantage, and none of them, let gentlemen say what they please, are represented in parliament. They can't be serious when they insist even on their being virtually represented: Will any man in this house get up and say, he is one of the representatives of the colonies? when, so far from being an object of their choice, the most sensible man in the colonies scarce knows such a gentleman exists. One gentleman in the course of this debate, (G. Elliott) has observed, that the commons have maintained and asserted their right against the crown, and against the Lords, of solely voting money without the controul of either, any otherwise than by a negative: And will you suffer your colonies to impeach, to attack those rights, to impede the exercise of them, untouched, as they now are, by the other branches of the legislature. This, I confess, appears to me the strangest argument I ever heard; can there be a more absolute acknowledgment of your right, a more declared avowal of your power, than a petition, humbly submitting their cause to your wisdom and justice, and praying to be heard before your tribunal, against a tax that will affect them in their tenderest parts, in their privileges, that at least you have suffered, and in their property, acquired by your protection. I am therefore, from a principle of lenity, policy, and justice, for receiving the petitions of a numerous, useful, opulent people, from whom this country derives its greatest commerce, strength and consideration."

Of all the speeches I ever heard in my life, Mr. Yorke's was the ablest; but it is impossible for me, & dishonoring him, to give it you: It was composed of history, law, oratory, & argument. He answered all the speakers against the bill; gave reasons for the practice of refusing petitions, and why it did not obtain earlier, because the crown formerly had a revenue of its own. He explained the constitution of the colonies, which he said he had much consider'd, and the more he consider'd them, the more exact he saw the resemblance they bore to corporations, and corporations only; that the power of legislation given them, was that of making by-laws for their own provincial purposes, subject as well to parliamentary as royal controul. That it was absurd to suppose that a body of adventurers could carry the legislative power of Great-Britain along with them; that he was sure the charters could convey no such power, for the very best reason in the world, because the prerogative could not grant it. He called the charters of the two proprietary governments, the King's standing commissions, and the Proprietaries, his hereditary governors: In short, from the opinion of the most sensible unbiassed members of parliament, I am induced to think it one of the best speeches ever made there. The bill was read the first time without a syllable being said, nor do I expect any more will. I think matters have been ill managed. There has not been so much opposition as to a common Turnpike bill.

From a London News-Paper of April 6. 1765.

CRY aloud and spare not. If ever there was an occasion so to do; the present is a most alarming one. I hear there is a bill now offering to a certain honourable assembly, to punish mutiny and desertion, and for the better providing quarters for the troops in America; in which there is a clause allowing troops to be billetted in private as well as public houses. Good God! are there no watchful guardians of our liberties left? are there no remains of those noble patriots who struggled so hard against standing armies, who now dare legally and constitutionally oppose a measure big with the most direful mischiefs, and destructive of that happiness every Englishman has been taught to believe he has a right to enjoy in his own house? The laws of England call every man's house, his castle; but surely they never meant it should be garrisoned by hireling soldiers. If that should ever be the case in England (which Heaven avert) in one sense, indeed, it may still be called his castle but more properly, his prison, where officers will be the goalers, and soldiers the turnkeys. Consider, my countrymen, if this will not be of more dangerous consequence to the peace, happiness and liberty of every man, than even the destructive power of general warrants? There will then indeed be but little occasion to send messengers to ransack a man's private papers, as no one will dare to speak disrespectfully of governors or ministers (how bad soever in future times they may be) much less write to advise others of their danger, when he will be constantly watched, in his own house, by two or three military spies; especially, if he should offend any one of these honorable gentlemen, by refusing him the whole, or if he should rather chuse it, the half of his wife or daughter's bed. I need not be very particular in pointing out the infinite disquietudes and mischiefs, which must result from a measure so contrary to the very being of liberty; every Englishman must shudder at the thoughts of so unconstitutional a design. It has been lately the fashionable language to call the colonies, members of the mother country, in charging them with taxes, &c. certainly then they have an equal right to be secured in their liberties; but if justice to them does not effect you, a regard for yourselves surely must alarm you: for if such a law be once suffered to pass for America, you may depend upon it, arguments, of one sort or other, will not be wanting to impose the same on the mother country, whenever in future any weak, wicked, or arbitrary minister shall please to attempt it. Should you therefore neglect to nip in the bud so dangerous a design, you would act like a man who should refuse to use the means to quench a fire in his neighbour's house, because a thin partition divided it from his own. But I hope better things from Englishmen; and doubt not some able pen will so improve these loose hints, as to prevent so terrible a clause from passing into a law. CIVIS.

London, April 16. This day came on the trial of Lord Byron at Westminster-hall.

Orders were given out for 500 horse and foot guards to mount at four o'clock this morning at Westminster-hall to prevent any riotous proceedings at the trial of Lord Byron.

Fifteen guineas was offered this morning by a gentleman for a ticket to be admitted into Westminster-hall, during the time of Lord Byron's trial. ¶

We are informed that there are now at our Universities several Indians, who, as soon as they are qualified, will be admitted into holy orders.

The reports concerning a change in the office of Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, are groundless.

A proposal will soon be made to parliament to encourage the importation of American Wool.

Capt. Jarrold in 11 weeks from Falmouth brings a melancholy account of the plague being broke out at Scilly. He saw a letter from Penzance to the Collector at Falmouth, requesting him to send immediately to London for orders to stop the communication, there being a report that half the inhabitants together with the Collector, Surveyor & Controller, were carried off with it. They are taken with a violent pain in the back, fever and dizziness, & rarely survive 24 hours. A vessel from the Levant had been lost on the rocks of Scilly, from which had drove ashore some cotton, and it was supposed they had thereby caught the distemper.

FORT-ROYALL, (in Granada) Jan. 12.

To his Excellency Robert Melvill, Esq: Captain-General & Governor in chief in and over Granada, the Grenadines, Dominica, St Vincent, Tobago, &c.

The Addreſs of the Inhabitants and Merchants of the Iſland of Granada.

May it pleaſe your Excellency,

PERMIT us Sir, to wait upon you on your arrival to your government with our ſincereſt congratulations,---congratulations flowing from hearts that glow with the livelieſt emotions of joy.

We cannot but reflect (for many of us know and all have heard) that when placed over a people among whom the will of the Prince, or of his governour, had been a law, ſo far from being deluded by the enchantments of arbitary power, you ſtill remembering yourſelf to be a Briton, born and educated to liberty, ſoftened the natural rigour of their government, and, from the feelings of your own heart, communicated the ſame ſenſations to theirs, and taught them, in a high degree, the invaluable enjoyment of Britiſh freedom.

The form of the conſtitution indeed was wanting, but the eſſence, principle, and ſpirit of it was preſerved, and made the undeviating rule of your conduct, and the inſtrument of good to the people of Guadaloupe, whoſe children will be taught your name when they hear their fathers, with a ſigh, regret the happineſs they have loſt, and once enjoyed under a Britiſh governour.

Great ability for command, a mild and gentle exerciſe of power, an overflowing and diffuſive benevolence of heart in the once beloved governour of Guadaloupe, raiſe in us the higheſt expectations of the general of the government of Granada, and fill us with the moſt ſanguine hopes of a full enjoyment of all the bleſſings of civil liberty under his adminiſtration.

Nice and arduous, we are ſenſible, is the taſk to give its juſt applauſe to ſuperiour virtue, when ſpeaking to the perſon in whom it is ſo eminently lodged, without giving pain to modeſty. In tenderneſs therefore to your Excellency's delicacy, we ſuppreſs much of what we think, and fain would ſay, however ſuitable to the occaſion; but ſuffer us to give a looſe to our hopes, and with pleaſure to look forward to the proſpect that opens upon us, and preſents us with a ſcene of happineſs under your Excellency's government.

Hitherto governours, entering upon their government, have permitted the people only to hope that they ſhould be happy under the approaching adminiſtration; you Sir, have raiſed hope into confidence, and eſtabliſhed a right to our acknowledgments, by important ſervices already done us.

Your unwearied attendance, your inceſſant application at the ſeveral boards and departments of office, and to great perſonages in England, from whence or whom any benefit could be derived to your government, anticipated even our wiſhes, and laboured to procure all that zeal and induſtry could contrive, for our ſafety, liberty and happineſs.

Happy, as Britiſh ſubjects could be, where a Britiſh form of government was wanting, we have been, but ſtill we pined after paſt enjoyments, and ardently wiſhed for a repetition of a perfectly, pure perfectly Britiſh conſtitution. The diſtinguiſhed honour of obeying your royal maſter's command, to make the government of Granada as free as any other part of his Majeſty's dominions,—to introduce the laws of England,—to eſtabliſh a civil juriſdiction.---to give certainty to law, and perfection to liberty,---is reſerved as the peculiar happy lot of your Excellency.

Equally honourable to you, Sir, and happy for us, is the beginning of your Excellency's adminiſtration. That which conſtitutes the honour of the governour muſt make the happineſs of the people. Long may they mutually reſult from each other. May it, during your government, Sir, be one continual ſtruggle of emulation between your Excellency and a graceful people, whether you beſt ſhall govern, or we beſt obey, whether you ſhall be more abundant in giving happineſs, or we in feeling and expreſſing our gratitude for it. From paſt experience we hope, nay aſſure ourſelves of every thing from you; for no one better knows, no one, we are ſure will more deeply feel the pleaſure of giving happineſs to a people.

To which Addreſs his Excellency was pleaſed to make the following Anſwer.

"Gentlemen,

"I return my ſincereſt acknowledgments for your warm and affectionate addreſs.

"The ſtrong ſenſe of approbation you have been pleaſed to expreſs with reſpect to my principles and conduct, in a former government, and the value you have put on my late well meant endeavours to promote the juſt intereſt of this colony, give me the higheſt ſatisfaction.

"Be firmly aſſured, gentlemen, that at all times my moſt earneſt ambition will be to merit the approbation of our royal maſter, promote the true happineſs of Granada, and to enjoy the ſincere confidence and attachment of all his Majeſty's faithful ſubjects in it."

All Perſons that have Accounts open with me in New-England, either in my own Name, or as Truſtee for Nathaniel Wheelwright, Eſq; are hereby deſired as ſoon as may be, to adjuſt and ſettle ſaid Accounts with Meſſrs. Joſeph Green, Nathaniel Bethune, William Molineux, and Tuthill Hubbard, who are all and each of them impower'd by me for that Purpoſe.
